Fused Glass Artist, Photographer, Jewelry Designer

Biography

Born in Westchester, NY, Lois Johnston studied art at the Propersi School of Art in Greenwich, Connecticut and various universities in New York. While working in the corporate community, she continued her training with artists specializing in painting, weaving, stained glass and then received instruction in fused glass after moving to Florida.

Raised amongst her family's gardens and orchards has greatly influenced Lois' choice of artistic subjects, giving her a true appreciation for the beauty and design elements of nature. Traveling across the U.S., including Hawaii and Alaska, and spending time in Peru, Bolivia, Spain, Ireland, Italy and many of the Caribbean Islands have given her an appreciation for the majesty of landscapes. Now living in Florida, she is constantly inspired by fabulous sunsets and seascapes that surround her and has recently developed an affinity for abstract art.

Prior to relocating in Florida, she worked as a commissioned artist, known for her portraits, botanicals and stained glass. Lois also conducted classes in various arts and fine crafts. She has taught glass fusing classes at AAE Glass, Cape Coral Art League, Fort Myers Art League, Arts of the Inland in LaBelle, and has been teaching at the Cape Coral Arts Center for 20 years.
