

Jan Butler

Fused Glass Artist

About the Artist

Jan Butler, who describes herself as a lifelong art medium sampler, started working in fused glass six years ago and found the one that stuck. “Fused glass is as much science as it is art, with a lot of excitement thrown in each time one opens the kiln,” she said. “There are so many techniques and so many types of glass that for someone who is willing to keep learning and experimenting, there is no end to the journey.”

Jan likes to share this anecdote from when she was taking fused glass classes and would often come home and complain about what she wasn't able get into the community kiln that week. So, as a surprise her husband bought her a kiln. She then took over the third garage (which is air conditioned) but still worked in the house a lot. Jan says: “I hate to admit the number of times my husband has exclaimed ‘Ow!’ then looked at the bottom of his bare foot, while I have watched and asked ‘what color glass?’”
